UNM Law Connect

March 2021

U.S. News & World Report ranks Clinic #9, UNM Law #11 for Diversity, Natural Resources & Environmental Law (NREL) Program #34

The U.S. News & World Report rankings came out today and we are thrilled to share that our Law Clinic moved into the top 10, the school was ranked 11th for diversity, and the NREL Program held steady at 34th for Environmental Law. Not only do these rankings reflect the hard work and dedication of our faculty and students, but they also demonstrate our school's commitment to these programs and the diversity of our state. Please join us in celebrating these well-deserved accolades!

Women Making History at UNM Law

March is Women's History Month and our Law School is not short on history-making alumnae and faculty. Raquel Marquez Frankel was the only woman in the Law School's first entering class in 1947. The following year, Joan Robinson Roberts and Margaret Keiper Dailey enrolled and became the Law School's first female graduates in 1951. In 1962, Justice Mary Walters graduated and went on to become the first female District Court judge in NM, Chief Judge on the NM Court of Appeals, and Justice on the NM Supreme Court. In 1971, Yvonne Knight became the first Native American woman to graduate from our law school. In 1972, Anne Bingaman became the Law School's first female law professor, and during her time at the Law School played a pivotal role in the adoption of the equal rights amendment in the NM Constitution. In 1973, Justice Petra Jimenez Maes (Ret.) and Patricia Madrid became the first Hispanic women graduates. That same year Pamela Minzner joined the faculty as the 2nd female law professor and later went on to become the first female Chief Justice of the NM Supreme Court. In 1974, Barbara Brown Simmons became the first African American woman graduate. By 1977, UNM Law had one of the highest percentages of female students in the country. There have been many other female firsts and trailblazers since then. In 2003, Suellyn Scarnecchia became our first (and only) female dean. See below for alumna Deb Haaland's amazing firsts. Blaze on Law Lobas!

3L Kristen Burby (B.S. Environmental Resource Management) and 2L Samantha Catalano (B.S. Biology) spoke to the UNM Society of Women Engineers in March to encourage STEM students to consider how a legal education could help further their career goals. Burby and Catalano shared their path from STEM training and careers to law school. Professor Sonia Gipson Rankin, who also has a STEM background, joined them in providing connections between law and STEM.

UNM Law Clinic Partners with ADOBE Program to Give Previously Incarcerated Youth a Brighter Future

Students in the Child & Family Justice Clinic are working with the groundbreaking ADOBE Program to respond to the needs of youths who have been incarcerated at the Bernalillo County Youth Services Center ("YSC"). The ADOBE Program provides medical, mental health, navigation, and education services to previously incarcerated teenagers and their families. Through the Child &

Family Justice Clinic, students offer program participants advice for various legal matters, including housing conditions and eviction, public benefits, guardianships, domestic violence, teen parent custody and child support, and emancipation. The ADOBE Program has been able to reduce the recidivism rate of participants in the program to just 21% compared to the national average of 70%. Read more about the ADOBE Program and our students' involvement here.

Donor News

Lisa Curtis ('93) strives to protect and enhance the education and lives of children in New Mexico

Lisa Curtis has dedicated her career to helping others and is known in the legal community for protecting the rights of children. In 2014, the LK Curtis Children's Fund established the Michael Hart Children's Advocacy Fund Scholarship. The full-tuition scholarship is awarded to law students pursuing careers to benefit and advocate on behalf of children in New Mexico. Through her scholarship, Lisa is preparing the next generation of advocates to fight for New Mexico's children who face greater educational and socio-economic challenges than most children in the nation. Our thanks to Lisa for supporting our students and improving the lives of children in our state.
